Everything that fans need to know to tune in to Atlanta Braves games this season, including details on the new FanDuel Sports Network direct-to-consumer streaming option and Gray Media simulcast schedule

ATLANTA (February 11, 2025) – As pitchers and catchers report to North Port, Florida, for Atlanta Braves Spring Training this week, the team and their partners are working hard to educate fans on all the ways they can watch their favorite team. This season, fans will have more ways to watch the Braves than ever before, with local television, cable, satellite, and streaming options throughout Spring Training and the regular season. Fans can visit Braves.com/programming for details on how to watch and listen all season long.

FanDuel Sports Network

Braves' rightsholder, FanDuel Sports Network, will air seven Spring Training games, beginning on March 2, as well as regionally televised regular season games. Atlanta Braves games are widely available through FanDuel Sports Network on cable, satellite and streaming providers throughout the team's entire television footprint. New this year, games will air simultaneously on both FanDuel Sports Network South and FanDuel Sports Network Southeast.

All the network's Braves games and programming will also stream on the FanDuel Sports Network app and at FanduelSportsNetwork.com. Fans can access Braves content through the app either by authenticating through a pay TV provider or – for the first time ever – by subscribing directly to the app for $19.99 per month. Courtesy of Truist, the Atlanta Braves, and FanDuel Sports Network, A-List and A-List Premium Members will receive a personalized code via email to redeem three free months of the FanDuel Sports Network app.

FanDuel Sports Network will also be available via Prime Video for customers living within each team's designated geographic area. Launch timing and purchasing specifics will be announced at a later date.

Gray Media

Gray Media will exclusively broadcast 10 Spring Training games and simulcast 15 regular season games alongside FanDuel Sports Network. Games and additional Braves content will be available on Gray Media's network of stations in 24 markets across all six states of Braves Country.

Regular season games that will air on Gray TV channels as well as FanDuel Sports Network include Opening Day on March 27, the Braves Home Opener on April 4, and every Friday home game.*

Subject to MLB national TV schedule*

The games will broadcast over-the-air on Peachtree TV Atlanta's CW (WPCH 17.1) and Peachtree Sports Network (PSN 17.2) in Atlanta and throughout the Southeast through Gray's network of broadcast stations, including Palmetto Sports & Entertainment Network, the Tennessee Valley Sports & Entertainment Network, and portions of the Gulf Coast Sports & Entertainment Network. A select number of games will air on some of Gray's ABC, CBS, FOX, NBC, and CW affiliates.

Braves Radio Network

All regular season games can be heard in Atlanta on 680 The Fan (AM)/93.7 (FM), the 680 The Fan app, and regionally on over 170 stations across the Braves Radio Network, the largest radio network in professional sports. Spring Training radio coverage will be available on a combination of 680 The Fan (AM)/93.7 (FM), ESPN Atlanta 103FM, and the Braves Radio Network.

Additional details on how to tune in are available at Braves.com/Programming.
