Partnership reinforces Timberwolves ongoing commitment to fan accessibility and regional connection

Minneapolis/St. Paul – The Minnesota Timberwolves today announced an expanded broadcast partnership with Gray Media, extending free, over-the-air (OTA) access to Timberwolves basketball for fans across the Upper Midwest. Through this collaboration, the remaining three KARE 11 simulcasts will air in additional markets throughout Gray Media’s regional network – bringing Timberwolves action to even more households in Duluth, Mankato, and Rochester, Minnesota.

The partnership underscores the Timberwolves continued effort to make games more accessible and strengthen the team’s connection with fans across the region. By expanding OTA availability, the team ensures that more communities can experience the excitement of Timberwolves basketball – live, local and free.

“Gray’s local television stations are thrilled to bring Timberwolves basketball to their communities free, over-the-air,” said Sandy Breland, Chief Operating Officer of Gray. “We appreciate the partnership with FanDuel Sports Networks and the Timberwolves to make this happen.”

“As we build on our successful over-the-air partnership with KARE 11, this new collaboration with Gray Media further strengthens our commitment to expanding access and deepening fan engagement across Timberwolves Country,” said Timberwolves and Lynx Chief Communications Officer Patrick Rees. “We’re proud to continue providing free, over-the-air access to Timberwolves basketball through our partnership with FanDuel Sports Network, allowing even more fans across our viewing area to connect with their favorite team.”

Each simulcast will feature FanDuel Sports Network’s production of the games, including Wolves Live pre- and post-game shows hosted by Marney Gellner, with expert analysis from Rebekkah Brunson (Minnesota Lynx assistant coach) and Tom Crean (veteran college coach and analyst). Michael Grady and Alan Horton will share play-by-play duties, alongside color analyst Jim Petersen.

To further enhance the fan experience, the Timberwolves will spotlight each over-the-air broadcast with exclusive interviews, behind-the-scenes features, and special appearances from players, coaches, and front office executives.
